

AMENDMENTS TO THE ABSTRACT

Please substitute the following paragraph for the abstract now appearing in the currently filed specification:

-- An online entrusting system includes a manage and control unit, a database, a plurality of analysis modules and a reply means. The manage and control unit receives and processes a required information on an order inputted by a user. The required information relates to semiconductor package. The database records the required information and schedule information about processing the order. The analysis modules produce an analysis result about analyzing the required information on the order. The reply unit responds the analysis result of the required information to the user.--